

GEORGIU-CLASS

Entered Service: 2280

Overview: Designed during the Cold War with the Klingon Empire but entering service afterwards, the Georgiou class represents a lost path of starfleet warships that may have been built if not for the Khitomer accords. Designated as a 'Fast Battlecruiser' this vessel designed was dropped in favor the more well rounded Excelsior class vessels.

Only a handful of these vessels were ever built and the few that did were usually retrofitted to de-emphasize their offensive power in favor of a more general, exploratory role.

Capabilities: The Georgiou class was the result of a project to modernize and expand the federations defensive capabilities, made specifically with countering the threat of the Klingon K'tinga Battlecruiser in mind.

As part of the effort to bring modern enhancements into it's space frames, the Georgiou class placed heavy emphasis on it's significant augmentation to the the Warp engines as well as giving it a significantly outsized punch when it needs it.
