

Yeager-type Starship (NCC-65XXX)

SERVICE PERIOD: 2275 - 2380

OVERVIEW: When the Dominion War sapped resources from the Federation, they couldn't make ship fast enough. In several instances, Starfleet was forced to build ships out of existing pieces that were already built. Such is the case for the Yeager – type Starship. Not even an official class, the U.S.S. Yeager was the first ship that combined an Intrepid saucer sections with the aft of a Maquis Raider.

Constructed out of surplus parts at Utopia Plantatia, this allowed ships of this type to be rushed to the battlefield as another body. While its systems weren't as advanced as an Intrepid due to communication issues between the two types of technology, the Yeager was an extremely durable ship that could be run with a much lighter crew than its Starfleet predecessor.

CAPABILITIES: Capable of Warp 9 for about twelve hours, these ships could quickly get to an escalating tension or full-on battle to act as an additional barrier between the enemy and Starfleet's warships. With redundant systems and improved damage control, these ships were notoriously difficult to disable.
