

TZENKETHI

THE NEXT GENERATION ERA ONLY

Aggressive and territorial, the Tzenkethi Coalition is led by a ruler known as the Autarch. The Tzenkethi government is a kratocracy, and the Autarch retains their position for as long as they can hold onto power, which transitions via coups. Under the Autarch are a series of appointed ministers, known as Tzelnira, whose job is to maintain order during shifts of power. The Tzenkethi have a well-earned reputation for pragmatism and ruthlessness, with mercy only being granted to those who earn it. Tzenkethi have little respect for weakness or frailty, but acknowledge cunning as a variant form of strength. Early in the 24th Century, the Tzenkethi engaged in several skirmishes with the Klingon Empire and even fought a border war against the Federation. Following these defeats, the Tzenkethi withdrew behind their borders, participating in little diplomacy for the better part of a century. The Tzenkethi retain lingering animosity over their war with the Federation, and the Coalition engages in regular propaganda that paints the United Federation of Planets as immoral: a source of chaos, dissidents, and illicit chemicals. The Tzenkethi government considers the Federation's method of government—where all members and people have a voice—as tantamount to anarchy, and view Federation values as subversive. All Tzenkethi who leave their home world heavily armoured, with soldiers wearing defensive body armour with build-in weaponry and equipment. Specialists have additional equipment built into their armour, such as sensors, surgical equipment, or heavy mortars.
